THE GREAT WALL OF CHINA. A letter from Shanghai of the 21 of August, in the Moniteur, contains the following interesting account of a visit to the Great Wall of China:-"The treaties of Tien-sin having been rat fied by the Emperor Hien Fung, Baron Gros was desirous of visiting the Great Wall, and of judging from personal observation of the correctness of the statements representing it as commencing in the sea at the entrance of the Bay of Leotung -At 7 o'cleck in the morning of the 11th of July the Ambassader, followed by his secretaries and attaches, embarked on heard the small steamer the Pregent. The distance of the wall from the place where the Audacieuse frigate was at anchor was thought to be from 30 to 40 leagues. Towards evening the weather not being very clear, it was thought prudent not to approach too close to shore, and the steamer came to an anchor in the ofing. At daybreak on the following morning she again got under way, and soon after the wall appeared in view. It looked like a long range of buildings of the same height, crecellated, and traversing the plains from the sea to the foot of the chain of mountains which run parallel with the coast, but at more than a league inland. An hour after, the wall, with its crenellated top, forts, jettles running out into the sea, and the pageda on the shore, were perfectly distinct in all their details. We had before us the most picturesque prospect that can be imagined; along the sea coast the vast plain is covered with the most luxuriant vegetation with numerous villages buried in trees, and at the back a horizon of lofty mountains. At the foot of for sale by the wall, on the side of China, were seen the white tents of two Tartar camps with their horses grazing at liberty around. Seen from the Chinese side the wall resembles an immense work in earth, crowned with a clenellated wall in brick, but in a very dilapidated state. On the Mantebouria side on the contrary, it is built of brick on a foundation of stone. It has, along the whole length square towers at a distance from each other of about two bowshots' length, so that the enemy might be struck from either of them. It runs down into the sea by two parallel jetties, the incline of which is so slight that persons landing from a boat may easily walk up them. The largest vessels may approach to within about two miles of this spot, which is the place where future tourists ought to land .-Unfortunately we were not then aware of this fact, and we came to an anchor at a spot where the landing was not very easy. The shore was soon covered with Chinese from the neighboring villages.

M. Marques, the interpreter to the mission, and Count d'Ozery, the commandant of the Pregent, were the first to go on shore, in order to confer with the authorities, and ascertain whether any objection would be made to the looding of the party. A mandarin mounted on a white horse, and followed by two horsemen, arrived from the camp, to inquire what these men, come from an unknown world, wanted. On receiving pacific assurences from our interpreter, he said no opposition would be made to the disembarkation .-When all were on shore, we proceeded direct towards the wall. We had to cross several little revulets which run down towards the sea and we were afterwards obliged to strike a little more inland, in order to find ground rather less moist. As we approached toward the wall, we observed the Tertars mounting their borses, and betraying by their gestures, considerable emotion. They separated into three bodies -- one remained on borseback in front of the tents, thus cutting off the road to the wall, another proceeded on our lett, where one the high grass and th third advanced at a hand gallop to meet us. They asked whence we came, where we going, and told us that they could not allow us to advance any further. Their chief, they said. was absent, and they could not take on thems lves the responsibility of permitting us to approach. You may judge of our astonishment when we learned from these men, encamped as it were at the gates of the capitol that thay heard nothing of their country having been at war with France and England .--The taking of Canton, the bombardment of Takou, and the peace concluded at Tien-sin, they were completely ignorant of.

After a little negotiation we thought we had got over our difficulty, and we were allowed to advance, but we had not proceeded more than 300 or 400 yards when some fresh horsemen advanced, and urgently impressed on us the propriety of not going any further our revolvers, we might have kept off those 200 Tartar borsemen, and have mounted the walls in spite of them, but the Ambassador was anxious to avoid any dispute, and would not compromise his position for the mere gratification of curiosity. After having taken a few sketches, purchased some fans from the Tartars, and astonished a whole host of Chinese by letting them taste our brandy and look at our watches and compasses, Baron Gros returned to the boats. These Tartar borsemen had neither bows nor arrows, but they all bad matchlock gons slung over their shoulders. Their powder appeared to be very coarse, and, in addition to ball, they had in their cartouche-toxes small pellets of lead. Each man carried in his large boots his pipe and fan. Before leaving the coast we went in the Pregent to have another view of the country on the other side of the Great Wall. opposite the plains of Mantehouris, which were covered with the most extraordinary verdure, only to be found in countries where the ground, after being long buried in snow, is vivified by a hot sun. The wall was seen growing up as it were out of this exuberant vegetation, and ascending the side of the mountain, to follow, for more than 600 leagues, the half savage countries which extend Kou-Kou Noor. After having for some time contemplated this magnificent scene, Baron Gros gave the eignal for departure, and the Pregent steered for the Toki Islands, where GOODS, which I will sell low for cash. the Audacieuse frigate was waiting for us.'
